

Sharon Rozum joined Special Olympics Connecticut in 2018 and is currently the Senior Director of Partnerships & Corporate Relations.

Sharon develops, secures and stewards relationships with local businesses and corporate partners by engaging them through volunteerism and financial and in-kind support of Special Olympics Connecticut's year-round programs, competitions, special events and community impact programs.

Prior to joining Special Olympics Connecticut, Sharon worked in the school and non-profit fundraising industries for more than 18 years, as well as media and promotions. Now, she works closely with each of our corporate partners to help develop a strategy that aligns with their mission and employee engagement in the best way possible to support our athletes.

Fun Facts:

Favorite sports memory: Attending the send-off celebration for Team Connecticut going to the Special Olympics USA Games in Seattle's an seeing the joy on over 50 athletes' faces as they embarked on the journey of a lifetime.

Sports hero: Muhammad Ali

What does inclusion mean to you? A world where every person is celebrated for who they are and what they bring to the world, and are not judged on what they can or can't do.